8:30 am to 12:00 pm

When a person can't take care of himself, he often can't take care of others, including his animals.

This course provides important information to help recognize the signs of animals in need, understand the legal requirements for keeping common domestic pets, and how you can help these families before it reaches "a point of no return" and puts the family further into crisis.

Learn to recognize the signs of neglect, potential neglect, or an inability to provide for the animals in the home, before it becomes a point of crisis for everyone. It's not always obvious!

This course is for mental health professionals who find themselves working with individuals and families with pets in their homes, where there is a concern the animals are not being provided for as needed and required.

Help the families by helping the animals!
